

The season gets underway in Davos

The Steigenberger Grandhotel Belvédère marks the start of the year with a series of exciting package deals

Davos, 07 January 2022

The winter season in Davos is up and running. The Steigenberger Grandhotel Belvédère will be reopening for business on 7 January 2022 and has two exciting offers in store for its guests. “The Sky is the Limit” package will allow holidaymakers to combine a two-night stay including breakfast with a truly breathtaking paragliding flight over Davos. This deal also includes a cheese fondue dinner and an express sports massage. The “MouCuiWay” is a deluxe package for all those who are merely seeking to switch off and pursue a culinary adventure. In this case, special half-board stays are available for between 2 and 4 nights. The highlights comprise a Swiss evening featuring fondue together with a starter and dessert, an Italian-style dinner at which a ‘Dolce Vita’ 3-course menu will be served and a Spanish experience complete with six mixed tapas and a wine pairing. There is also a “European Journey”, which involves an international 4-course menu. An afternoon English high tea is also included. A 50-minute deep relaxation massage session and an express facial will also both ensure that guests are able to unwind.

The Grandhotel Belvédère is located 1,560 metres above sea level in the sophisticated Swiss resort of Davos and offers fabulous views. Few hotels anywhere in the world are more steeped in history. After starting out as an elegant boutique hotel with 30 rooms, the “Belvédère” grew to become a Fin de Siècle-style romantic palace. Now housing 96 rooms and 30 suites, it has been at the very heart of social life in the town since first opening on 17 July 1875. Other stand-out facilities include a spa area with a swimming pool, a whirlpool and four saunas alongside seven restaurants and bars and nine conference and meeting rooms.
